

Lee Arbetman is Street Law, Inc.'s senior fellow and served as Street Law's executive director from 2008–2020. Since 1975, Lee has served Street Law in a variety of roles, providing teacher training, program dissemination, curriculum development, and staff supervision. He is the co-author of Street Law's premier textbook, Street Law: A Course in Practical Law, and co-author of United States Government & Civics. Lee co-leads the Supreme Court Summer Institute for teachers. Lee was awarded the American Bar Association's Isidore Starr Award for contributions to law-related education. He holds a J.D. from The George Washington University Law School, an M.Ed. in social studies education from the University of Massachusetts, and a B.A. in history from Grinnell College.

Cathy Ruffing brings nearly three decades of classroom experience to her role as Street Law's senior director of teacher professional development and curriculum. She has both designed and taught high school law courses and is the go-to person for high school law teachers wishing to implement practical law courses at their schools. She directs the annual Supreme Court Summer Institute and travels across the country bringing high-quality professional development to social studies teachers. She is co-author of Street Law: A Course in Practical Law and lead author of United States Government & Civics and accompanying inquiry journal. Cathy is a National Board for Professional Teaching Standards certified teacher.