Richard Samdperil

Richard Samdperil is a partner at Samdperil & Welsh in Exeter and an adjunct faculty member at the University of New Hampshire Franklin Pierce School of Law, where he teaches pretrial and trial advocacy in the Daniel Webster Scholar Honors Program. He has also taught criminal law, criminal procedure, and practical skills courses and served as interim director of the law school's Criminal Practice Clinic from 2019 to 2020.

In 2024, he was a scholar-in-residence at Symbiosis Law School in Pune, India, where he taught legal writing and advocacy skills and lectured on the American legal system and criminal law. Before entering private practice in 2006, Samdperil spent 11 years with the New Hampshire Public Defender, serving as a trial attorney, managing attorney of its Manchester office, and assistant appellate defender.

He has more than 30 years of legal experience and has briefed or argued more than 60 cases before the New Hampshire Supreme Court. Appointed to the New Hampshire Judicial Council in 2020 and reappointed in 2024, he currently serves as its vice chair.
